HISTORY OF CHEAHA STATE PARK

The State of Alabama acquired eleven state parks in 1933 among these was Cheaha. Cheaha has continuously operated as a state park since 1933, making it the oldest continuously operating Alabama State Park. The official opening date for Cheaha State Park was June 7, 1939.

Between its acquisition in 1933 and its official opening in 1939, the ground work for the park was initiated and performed by the gallant men of the Civilian Conservation Corp., the "C.C.C.'s". The developments initiated and completed under the C.C.C. program included roads, stone cabins, bald rock lodge, the observation tower, picnic shelters, hiking trails, lake and beach facilities, bathhouses and other recreational areas. These C.C.C. facilities continue to be used by the public providing the nucleus of today's park.

In 1973, as increased demand for state park facilities escalated, a restaurant, hotel and chalets were added to the existing C.C.C. park facilities. Later in 1997 the cabins, motel and chalets were renovated to better serve this increased recreational demand.

Today, the C.C.C. facilities and the newer facilities both continue to serve the recreational needs of Alabama residents and tourists alike.

Cheaha Mountain is an extension of the Appalachian Mountain range and is the highest peak in Alabama at 2,407 feet above sea level.

Cheaha State Park, which is prominently located atop the mountain, provides a most spectacular view of this rugged mountain range including the Talladega National Forest.

Upon gazing out upon this scenic mountain landscape, it is no wonder the Native American word "Cheaha", meaning "high place" was given to this mountain.
